It has been a little over a year since I received the challenge of filling the large shoes of Mrs. Marian Stryker as editor of the Hope College Magazine. During that period I have spent considerable time measuring the opinions and receiving the suggestions of you, our alumni, and faculty toward our publication.

This has been accomplished through both personal contact and a survey this past summer of randomly selected alumni. The purpose of the survey was to measure attitudes toward the Hope College Magazine and our tabloid newsletter News from Hope College.

The response was gratifying as 56% of the alumni in the survey responded. The response by graduates (61%) was greater than those of non-graduates (27%), apparently indicating a greater loyalty to the college.

Both publications received a ‘B’ grade as 91% of the respondents stated the magazine is a useful source of information and 88% gave that rating to the newsletter.

Class notes are the favorite regular feature of readers followed by advanced degrees, deaths, births, and marriages. All of the regular features received high enough to indicate that our alumni want this type of information. We appreciate knowing that as many colleges have eliminated this type of information from their publications, citing a lack of alumni interest or economic reasons.

More important than the statistical conclusions were the helpful suggestions offered in response to the questions:

What are some of the topics you would like to see included in future Hope College communications publications?

Do you have any specific comments regarding Hope College communications publications?

Many of the suggestions have become guideposts for us in determining content in our communications publications for future editions.

One of the suggestions offered by several respondents was that articles about and by faculty members appear more regularly. The September/October issue of News from Hope College contained an article by Dr. William Vanderbilt, chairman of the physical Education department, on women in sports and this issue includes a feature of longtime English faculty member Dr. James Prins. Our plan is publish an in-depth article by a faculty member in each edition of News from Hope College and a feature about a faculty member in the magazine.

We have been challenged to write articles on a number of topics including:

- How the men and women of Hope College are helping to solve the problems of our cities.
- Changes in attitudes toward religion among the student body, the role of student government on campus, the counseling students receive relative to the shrinking job market.
- More dialogue on some of the issues that confront the larger community of Hope. "Hope grads in the world are facing political, social and moral questions. Let's talk about them!"

I welcome your suggestions for other features you'd like to read in our publications. Drop me a line.

The survey wasn't without criticism. The responses also exposed some myths.

One alumna told us that by "not sending the anchor to alumni gives the impression of shielding the alumni from the actual thoughts and feelings of students on campus today!" Many alumni and their parents have mail subscriptions to the anchor. There is no prohibition to your receiving the students' perspective.

Another alumna said "too much space is given to articles from young people who are still in the college shelter — not enough from alumni."

Another told us to "stop making alumni sound like world beaters." We can't help it if we're proud of your accomplishments and want the world to know.

Some said we over-emphasize the religious aspect of the college; others said it wasn't expressed enough.

There were several expressions of appreciation from alumni who have rare opportunities to return to campus and observe activity first-hand. We especially appreciated the comments of one alumna who noted "‘having lived on an island for 19 years, I certainly look forward to receiving Hope news!’"

We enjoy keeping you informed. Please use the flap on your Annual Alumni Fund envelope to send us your news. There doesn't have to be a check in the pocket to have that news published either; although every contribution is appreciated as our college tries to maintain its margin of excellence.

Dr. James Prins does not particularly like the idea of an interview. He fears a dearth of material. Besides, he says, "Good quotes come only spontaneously when something occurs in a classroom and then they become mythical. But they don't happen in cases like this, where we say, 'Let's put it down in words'—it doesn't happen."

He likes even less the idea of being photographed. He is concerned that former students may see his image spread on the pages of the alumni magazine and deduce that he is not well: "A person gets old and dowdy, and I'm a lot more stooped than I used to be." He reveals that his wife, Iris, objected to his appearance when he left the house that morning, pointing to his untrimmed hair, the absence of a suit and tie. "My wife said, 'How do you dare!' " he accents each word and then pauses before deciding to finish, "'How do you dare have an interview the way you look today?"'

But one must protest. The years seem to have been rather benevolent in dealing out their ravages on the person of Prins. His slenderness remains intact; his longer hair seems to shorten his face a bit; the cranberry V-neck sweater relaxes the angularity of his frame.

And, in time, the "good quotes" do come, as Dr. Prins begins to lapse into the manner of speaking which has made his classes immemorable for the thousands of literature students who have enrolled in his courses since he first came to Hope as a faculty member in 1946. Perhaps a former student best described the intrigue when he pinpointed Dr. Prins as the only teacher he had ever studied under who lectured in stream of consciousness.
It is somewhat in this form that we begin to discuss his now nearly 60 year long life, and from the stream a pattern emerges, a pattern of what Dr. Prins describes as the “accidents” of his life which have defined his now nearly 30 year long career as a member of the Hope faculty in the department of English.

A Holland, Mich. native, he enrolled in Calvin College in 1934. He transferred to Hope the following year as a prelaw student, majoring in English. He graduated in 1938, “poorer than poor.” Faced with the financial impossibility of attending law school, Prins opted instead for graduate work in English at the University of Michigan. He received his M.A. degree in 1939. For the following three years, he taught at the Shepherd, Mich. High School.

He entered the Army in 1942 and served in the military police division. While stationed in South Hampton, England, he met his future wife, Iris. They were married in 1949. (Dr. and Mrs. Prins have two children. Christopher is a sophomore at Harvard, possessing what his father unconvincingly describes as “an appalling interest” in literature. Robin is a high school junior.)

After his discharge in the early winter of 1946, Prins came back to Holland, where he planned to bide his time until fall when he would enter the University of Michigan to obtain his Ph.D. degree.

Instead, he was approached by then Hope president Irwin J. Lubbers and Professor Clarence DeGraff, who were attempting to prepare for the monumental post-war enrollment jump. Without great enthusiasm, Prins agreed to teach English for a semester. The semester completed, he was anxious to begin his work at U. of M., where he had been offered a teaching fellowship.

Instead, Dr. Lubbers’ noted powers of persuasion were directed toward this young English instructor. Prins eventually received his Ph. D., but he did so while a professor of English at Hope.

At this point, as well, circumstances redefined Dr. Prins’ intentions: “I think that you ought to believe that my original motivation in literature was creative. I always thought that I would like to write. As I look at it now, I don’t think I’d be a very good writer. But when I started teaching here, I had the idea that perhaps teaching was the best way into writing that a person could find. But that’s very false. It probably hurts a person. I find that before I can dare to teach anything, I have to read everything I can get, all the critical material and all the novels by that person, before I would dare to get before a class and utter any words that I think are important enough to utter. It takes so much time.

“But I think you should know that I’m not unhappy”, he continues. “The accidents that occurred in my life just occurred the way that they did. I’m not sorry it happened this way. I mean, what’s a more wonderful thing than to be in touch with the things you like—the literature and the people who are young. They’re young!” he says emphatically. “You get paid for staying in touch with young people.

“It’s been very wonderful. It’s almost embarrassing sometimes that students remember you, remember you in a kindly way,” he says. “People come back and search you out, got a letter once in a while. It’s always been reciprocal. I’ve always enjoyed the students very much. You get old, things do change, but this contact with the young people remains as something very important to me.”

What has changed for Dr. Prins? Small things mostly—the informality of the times, the addition of a Saul Bellow novel on the reading list for American novels, slightly smaller classes the past few years. He believes that former students remember him best for the stance he always assumed while teaching—sans chair, with one long foot flung over the desk top. “That’s changed,” he says “I sit down now almost all the time. I’m still animated, but I’m much more desk-bound than I used to be.”

And probably Dr. Prins is right—one remembers the small things: this teaching posture, the free flowing manner of his lectures, the way he pronounces “literature” to come out more like “litrature.” Many students, majors in varied fields of study, also remember, however, the uncanny way Dr. Prins had of making the study of literature in the genre of the novel a very meaningful experience. And that has not changed.

“I hope that this general interest holds,” says Dr. Prins, “that the preseminary student, or the sociology or the history or the philosophy student does think that coming into contact with ideas as they’re dramatized in novels is a significant thing to do. It’s a way to approach life. What can you take for credit that’s more fun, than to read all these novels that have dramatic and narrative situations in them?"
Let's get at what is not being used, both to fulfill the life of the individual, because out of giving and out of knowledge of yourself comes such joy and satisfaction,—and to affect the world!"

This is the way Dr. Beth Marcus '42, executive director of Reformed Church Women and head of Adult Voluntary Services for the Reformed Church in America, defines here relationship to the role of both women and men in the denomination.

And for Dr. Marcus, this philosophy is also one which has defined the course of her own life, causing her to move several times out of comfortably productive situations toward new challenges and new goals.

Dr. Marcus first put her administrative talents to use after World War II, when she was involved in organizing a program of assistance for servicemen and their families in her position as executive secretary of the Ottawa County Chapter of the American Red Cross. Based in her home town of Holland, Mich., for 10 years Dr. Marcus led an active, contributing, and successful life in this position.

"I was extremely happy in what I was doing and I thought that there wasn't anything I'd like to do better," she recalls.

And then came the first new challenge, which at the time seemed to be more of "a shock," she relates. In the early 1950's this energetic young woman was approached by various members of the Board of Domestic Missions of the RCA, who inquired whether or not she would like to take on a new position. "I was impressed by them and I was impressed by the challenge, but I just couldn't quite see myself in the job. I was so happy in what I was doing."

Dr. Marcus took a trip to the Caribbean and she relates the incident which accompanied her return. "I can still see that hotel room in New Orleans, where I sat on the bed and something said to me that day. "You've got to go to New York.""

In September of 1953, almost a year after she had first been offered the RCA position, Dr. Marcus arrived in New York. "It was the Jewish holidays, something which somehow or another I wasn't even aware of in Holland, Mich. It was a new experience and I moved into a whole new kind of context there in a city where other faiths and other cultures are certainly predominant." She recalls with a smile that one of her first impulses after arrival in this big, bustling, nearly foreign city was to find a broom and start sweeping the streets, Holland fashion, to get rid of some of the debris which she soon learned was part of her new home's landscape.

Certainly these days could have given way to feelings of insecurity and perhaps even regret, but instead Dr. Marcus devoted all her thoughts to her new work at Reformed Church headquarters. And almost as soon as she began working, she began traveling and soon New York City became a stopover home, a place where she now spends less than half of her Sundays each year. "Sometimes I wonder why I even bother to pay rent!" she says.
The traveling has always had a purpose. Perhaps a friend and colleague, Julia Walvoord '34 Van Wyk, current president of RCA Women, describes it best: "As Beth travels, she listens to what people have to say and is ready to do what she can to alleviate some of the burdens and solve some of the problems she hears about—which is a great combination."

Says Dr. Marcus: "My philosophy has always been that to do the job in New York, I have to know what's going on in the field. And therefore, I spend a lot of time with people."

This warm and genuine interest in the human element of her work, Dr. Marcus' exceptional administrative talents, and what the late Mrs. Wilbur Wormuth, former president of the RCA Women's Organization, called "an unusual capacity to stimulate people to action"—this combination distinguished Dr. Marcus' 15 year long career in her first position with the national offices of the RCA. During this time, she served as executive administrator of ministries in Indian American communities and in Kentucky, and worked on promotion and personnel for all North American ministries. She also became board administrator of Southern Normal High School. During her period of service, major capital improvements were made on the campuses in Annville, Ky. and Brewton, Ala. and in Indian communities. Her emphasis on Christian higher education and her desire to stimulate people to their greatest potential led many mission school graduates to Hope College, as well as to Central and Northwestern Colleges.

It was exciting work. But 15 years of passing time again brought a new challenge. The RCA underwent reorganization, and while Dr. Marcus was offered a position in which she would continue to have much the same duties, she says: "It seemed to me that they needed a new face, that they needed a new philosophy. Again, I have to say that I leaned upon the Lord for some guidance. In 1968, the General Synod asked if I would take over as director of Promotion and Communications."

During her three years in this position, TRAVARCA (the RCA television, radio, audio-visual office) was started and a media coordinator appointed. Information Services were instituted, and "Today in the RCA," the forerunner of "Hotline," became a regular publication of the office.

"Again, it was a good experience, but I began to realize that I was dealing more with paper than I was dealing with people," recalls Dr. Marcus. So she eagerly accepted the opportunity to aid in organizing and administering the Adult Voluntary Services program. Again, she was leaving behind work in which she had been successful and venturing into a position which she describes as "one in which it was very difficult to set goals, because it was an unknown. We had no idea how many would participate."

But the program which Dr. Marcus put into motion soon became successful. She reports that in the last six months alone, 153 volunteers of all ages have used their time, skills and resources toward short-term mission service.

"It's exciting to build something which ends up with the person who has gone home and saying, 'I received so much more than I gave.' It's exciting when older people say they can give a month before they go to Florida for the winter. They go to Kentucky, for example, and the first thing you know, they say, 'Well, I don't really need to go to Florida. I'm going to stay here and work...'

Dr. Marcus could see a future of tremendous expansion in her new position. She was then asked to serve on a committee to find a successor for the retiring director of Reformed Church Women, Mrs. F. Welwood. It was somewhat disruptive when she found herself being offered the position. "My first impulse was to almost say, 'Don't bother me, I'm very happy with what I'm doing and I have things to do.' But again, the Lord apparently had some other things in mind for me.

"After a few months, it dawned on me that maybe I could combine the responsibilities because there did seem to be a juncture point," she continues. "Women in the church are great in terms of spreading the word when there's a need, so if I needed a volunteer they could be very helpful in finding one."

Dr. Marcus assumed her joint responsibilities on January 1, 1973. The original plan entailed putting 3/5 of her time into work for Reformed Church Women and 2/5 into work for the Adult Voluntary Services. "To date, I would say that it's worked out so I would guess I'm putting in as much time as two full-time jobs. But when you so thoroughly enjoy what you're doing, then time has no meaning."

Mrs. Van Wyk says, "Beth likes to do so many things that she finds it hard to squeeze enough hours and energy out of each day to accomplish the things she sets out to do. In her two responsibilities, she finds an outlet for her writing ability. She also communicates with many people by speaking through the denomination and attending meetings related to her work. Her talents for administrative work are put to use continuously. Her present responsibilities and her previous work have given her a wider personal acquaintance with the people, churches, and mission fields of the RCA than almost any other person. Her work load makes her a night owl, but she also likes to have fun!"

Dr. Marcus says she likes to travel, she likes new challenges, she loves fund-raising, and best of all she likes to see things accomplished. "It's exciting to be involved with Reformed Church Women in these days, when the United Nations names 1975 as International Women's Year, when our own church is going through a stage of development... when the role of women in the Reformed Church is in a stage of development which has many, many ramifications, both for the women and for the church.

"One of the joys of my life has been to work with people in a very intimate way and just to see in people so much ability and skill and talent," she continues. "So, when we speak about women, I relate that to my goal in life, which has been to help to recognize whatever power, strength or skill that God has placed in a human being; to release it, so it can be used for the good of society. And I'm so convinced that within women in the RCA, as well as within women of all denominations and within women in general, there is so much lying dormant, that is not being used... I believe that you can find all kinds of documentation for the Lord saying, 'I've given this to you, now use it to my glory.'

50 YEARS YOUNG
Hope College Women's League

Hope is an echo, Hope ties itself yonder, yonder
Carl Sandburg

You've come a long way, baby!
Yes you have; all the way from a dream in 1925 to nearly a half million dollars worth of comfort and beauty in 1975.

Since this is the Year of the Women and there is much editorializing on the women's liberation movement, we women of Hope College can with truth say that we have always been liberated.
The late President Wynand Wichers, speaking at Commencement at the 90th anniversary of the College in 1956, said,
"One of the surprising things is that this College, founded by a group of determined and hard-headed Dutchmen, should so early have had any interest in the higher education for women."

It is not surprising, therefore, that the Women's League for Hope College has had the support, the admiration, and perhaps the expectations of the College administrators, especially during the past thirty years when they took upon themselves "man sized" projects and succeeded in all of them. But the League did not take on the projects to demonstrate their women's rights, or liberation.
Research reveals that they were taken and completed under the inspiring motto of the College, Spera in Deo!

As heretofore mentioned, the League began with a dream... Some wise person has said "In every great human undertaking, for it to be able to succeed, there is a certain dream element."

Indeed, research as well as memory does reveal that this League began with the dream of a house mother who came to Voorhees Hall in 1920 with her three young girls. Recently widowed when her husband died in Japan during service in the Mission Field, Mrs. Edith Walvoord came with "thankfulness in her heart" that she had been guided into this good position in a pleasant atmosphere.

Mrs. Walvoord's anticipation of entering a cozy home was somewhat set back when she entered the doors of Voorhees Hall in 1920. The lounge into which she and her girls stepped had bare unpolished floors, ceiling lights only, no draperies, no cushioned window seats, no chairs, no rugs of any kind, only the table on which the postman left the mail, some trifles on the mantleshelf, a big tall clock and the portraits of Mr. and Mrs.
Voorhees.

Such was the atmosphere that welcomed them. However, like most colleges 50 years ago, Hope College felt herself very fortunate to have a girls' dormitory at all, and Voorhees being architecturally attractive on the outside, with mission dining room chairs and tables and with mission beds, dressers and straight bedroom chairs was considered adequate.
Austerity and education went hand in hand a half century ago.

During her first years at Voorhees, Mrs.
Walvoord pondered the barrenness of the reception room. After visiting with a woman from Iowa who told her what the church women were doing for their dormitory students, Mrs. Walvoord felt there was a suggestion in that conversation that could be the fulfillment of her dream.
She asked for an interview with the president of the College, Dr. Dimnent.
He listened kindly, but said thoughtfully
"all departments need money." Dr.
Dimnent mentioned especially the need for funds for the Bible Department. He did not think that going for funds for a "luxury" was the best way to get all needs provided for.

So action was delayed, but the dream did not die. In discussing her dream, a friend said, "Perhaps we can do something." Forthwith, the friend, Mrs.
George Huizinga invited several women from her church, Third Reformed, and from Hope Church to tea in her home.
Mrs. Walvoord spoke to these church women about her dream to make the reception room of the beautiful stately Voorhees Hall a pleasanter, warmer place.

The women accepted the idea with enthusiasm. Mrs. Huizinga was asked to be the treasurer to receive the moneys they knew would be forthcoming, and Mrs. C. J. Dregman was designated the president.

In the words of Mrs. Walvoord, speaking in 1935 to the Women's League about her early experience, "that was the fulfillment of my dream. Shortly after the tea Mrs. G. J. Diekema and a group of other women came with samples of blue carpet and lovely orange colored drapery material. From then on it has been one beautiful continued story of not only calling Voorhees Hall the 'House Beautiful' but many other dormitories have been furnished. And the future looks brighter than the past."
According to the memory of Mrs. George Pelgrim (now Mrs. Harris Meng) the idea activated the enthusiasm of the women not only of Third and Hope Churches, but of the women of all the Holland Reformed Churches who claimed Hope College. They wanted to make the College as attractive to women students as possible. With faith, charity, Hope and work they pushed on and had such a good time doing it that they suggested it to the women of other Reformed Churches in the Particular Synod of Chicago (which at that time comprised churches in the states of Michigan, Wisconsin, Illinois and Indiana).

The suggestion was well received. In a letter, dated April 14, 1926, written to the membership which included women from 48 churches out of the 130 in the Synod of Chicago, Mrs. Dregman and Mrs. Huizinga stated, "It is almost a year since we were organized and we are grateful indeed for what we were privileged to do through your prompt and loyal cooperation."

During the years following the furnishing of Voorhees Lounge, the League carried on "concerning itself with small projects," according to Mrs. George Albers. One unusual project during these years was the furnishing of chairs for the Y.M. and Y.W.C.A. room in the new Hope Memorial Chapel. The chairs were made of rosewood by the Mission School in India. Among the League's other projects they placed "dish gardens" on the dining room tables in Voorhees, provided pressing irons for the girls, put welcoming bouquets in the lounge for the opening of school, and other niceties. In 1944 when Van Vleck Hall became a women's dorm, it was included in the League's projects.

The real motive for the work was never forgotten. According to Mrs. Pelgrim, "The Women's League for Hope College has faith that every girl we attract to Hope College and hold at Hope College for four years will go out as a Christian leader. Our home-touch purchases have been motivated by this thought and by the knowledge that the church-related college is in strong competition with the extravagantly financed state schools."

The Women's League was a recognized and respected organization in the local area when the enrollment outgrew Voorhees Hall and its annex. Something had to be done. A new women's dormitory was the first of several new buildings to grace the campus during the next 20 years.

The new dormitory, named for the long time dean of women Winifred Durfee, was scheduled to open in 1950. President Irwin J. Lubbers, who had taken office in 1945, knew of the Women's League, as an organization committed to the role of making living quarters more pleasant for Hope College women. He presented the project of furnishing this brand new dormitory comprising 50 rooms, a lounge and two dining rooms to the executive committee of the League. There would be 50 rooms, furnishings for each would cost $500. With the rooms, dining room and lounge the project would amount to $35,000. This was a tremendous challenge to these women who had previously undertaken projects of an upkeep nature. Now the basics were faced. President Lubbers encouraged them and persuaded them that they could do it.

At first the executive committee thought it would be advisable for the committee members, the leaders, to go to the various church women's societies and tell them of the challenge. Mrs. J. Westerhof, president and Mrs. George Albers, secretary, talked to the Second Reformed Church and the First Reformed Church, Zeeland, one March afternoon. Their enthusiasm was contagious enough to get the promise of $500 from each group.

How to do it? Soon ten chapters of the League were started in various classes. Each chapter dreamed up fund raising projects, such as, Hope Chests, Bake Sales, Song Fests, Breakfasts, sponsoring of the Hope College Chapel Choir in concert, and in time the $35,000 and a little more was raised for the furnishing of Durfee Hall.

The organization of the chapters appears to have been the largest and most significant project attempted by the League. With the work, came the rewards. As the chapters reported their projects and earnings, they all reported also that the organization had brought the members and their churches closer to the College.

With the new Durfee Hall so well furnished in 1950, it was time to bring Voorhees Hall into a more comparable state of repair and furniture replacement. Bravely the League said that if given five years time they would try to raise the necessary $25,000 to make Voorhees up-to-date and preserve its colonial atmosphere. Of course the request was granted, but the amount was raised in four years.

In November of 1955, Mrs. George Albers, president of the League, wrote in a letter to League members: "The highlight of our October 28 meeting in Hope Memorial Chapel was Dr. Lubbers' report on the men's dorm which had been started just prior to our meeting. He told us the loan for the building had been granted by the Housing and Home Finance Agency of the federal government because a group had been found to underwrite the amount needed to furnish the building when it is completed. We are the group! When the Finance Agency looked at the record of the Hope College Women's League they said, 'that's good enough for us.' Though we have not been asked to raise this amount in any specified time, the sooner the better!'"
When this new unprecedented challenge of $50,000 for the men's dorm was undertaking with Janet Albers, ran, was an enthusiastic Hope state of New Jersey and wherever she might be. Jan told Mrs.
Albers about a fair or bazaar her church presented every year in Madison, New Jersey. This project had always brought in a considerable amount of money for their church. Why not try that?

So Mrs. Albers suggested it to her Execu-1956, it was too shocking and involved to be approved. But the seed was planted, and when Mrs. Albers presented it again in 1956, it was approved with enthusiasm. It was not only approved by the Board, it was voted into being at the October 1956 annual meeting by the 1,000 church women assembled in Hope Memorial Chapel.

At that session President Lubbers spoke to the assembly: "May God bless you in your endeavors and may we all be worthy recipients of the great service the Women's League is rendering. It will go down in the annals of the College as a notable contribution in its forward march towards realization of the ideal of her funders and of the generations that have so faithfully followed in their footsteps under the banner of Spera in Deo."

And so the delightful, profitable, and now renowned Village Square was launched. The 19th annual Square, August 1, 1975, was a great success as usual, more money was reaped than ever. Nineteen general chairmen have worried, worked and prayed their Squares to success.

The chairman of the 19th reported at a meeting of the Executive Board, "I so often found myself completely flustered, then I would feel the Presence of the Lord, and things turned out all right."

Most of the Board had served as chairmen and they agreed that this Presence was the motivating force that carried them to completion of their Squares, undergirded strongly, of course, by the spirited cooperation of their committees and the women of 200 churches out there helping.

At the close of this 19th Village Square year, this annual event alone has contributed $232,838.44 of the more than $475,000 the League has earned for the College since that tea party at Mrs.
Huizenga's in 1925.

The initial impetus for the Square was the challenge of the $50,000 project, which became $60,000 to furnish Kollen men's dormitory, quickly was reached, that was followed by the $60,000 project for Phelps; $100,000 for Van Zoeren Library; $91,900 for the Fraternity Complex and Gilmore Hall; $52,500 for Dykstra Hall; and $30,000 for redecorating and refurnishing Otte Conference Room and the dining room in Phelps Hall. What next?

To return to the beginnings of the Village Square which has been the big project for each chapter, each Church and each Woman of the League from 1956-57, one small four letter word WORK conjugates a whole year of thought, prayer, and activity which brought that "first annual!" Square off as a great success.

"THE SPIRIT OF '57" - or
"How we Survived that 1st Pickle!"
By Fritz M. Sennett

If I played the guitar
(And you could all help me sing)
We'd warble some notes
To make these Hope raters ring!

Let me recite you a ballad
About our good friend, Betty A.,
Who said to her Hope Women's League Board,
"Girls - HOllay!
I've got an idea that really should pay!"

Jan Yonkman reports that her New Jersey church has an annual fair at which everyone works -
They have jamps, baked goods and handcrafts, filed in booths on both floors.

Why not try this at Hope?
And use all OUTDOORS!

This was 1956 - but the Board did not give it their "Amen
So in '57, our Betty tried it again!

(Attending that meeting was Mrs. John Smalegan, That peppy Zeeland gal who devised the 1st plan!)

Never officially appointed; she recalls Betty's words as the afternoon grew rather short:
"Evie, you look into this -
And give us your report!"

Now, Evie had just adopted a family of three -
For her, every day was big shopping spree.

For shoes - and for jeans - FJ's hair ribbons, too
She was like the old woman who lived in the shoe:
When, into her home with a gig, gaily greeting.

Trumped a bevy of women for this "Hope Project" meeting.

This was a "FIRST!" - we all started from scratch;
And over coffee and cake, ideas started to "hatch".
What will we sell?? - Who will feed the food??
How many pots of hot coffee will have to be brewed??

Phyll White drew the first map
To direct a BIG crowd
When Evelyn DePree gathered the buffet menus,
"Till she dreamed 'noodles' out loud!
Her lists grew longer and longer,
Each church was assigned cakes, salads, hot dishes
When to Rein Visscher they went,
And he dampened their wishes!

"Ladies," he said, "It just ain't gonna work!"
"You must change your plans!
Can't you foresee the mad scramble
When you all come at once to claim dirty pans?"

Florence Jencks was enlisted and she and "Manager Rein"
Soon had buffet supper plans "whipped" into line!
"We can serve 1400 - with a wise bit of luck!
Either you gals are all crazy, or you have lotsa pluck!!"

Fritz Sennett made old English posters,
And supplied the name 'Village Square'.
(Planting those signs in the dark Nearly made her good husband swear!)
NEW BOARD MEMBERS

The Alumni Association Board of Directors announced the election of two new members following their annual Homecoming meeting in October. Dr. William E. Welmers '36 was elected Member-at-Large and Marge Lucking '48 French was elected Detroit Chapter Representative.

Dr. Welmers is professor of African languages at the University of California at Los Angeles, where he has been a faculty member since 1961. He pioneered in the development of modern techniques in foreign language teaching and is the author of numerous writings on linguistics and related subjects. His most recently published book is African Language Structures (1974). He is currently working on a Vai grammar book, one of six book-length projects he has planned for publication within the near future.

Dr. Welmers has been serving as president of the Southern California Alumni Club since February, 1975. He served previously as secretary of the Club.

He holds the Th.M degree from Westminster Theological Seminary and the Ph.D. from the University of Pennsylvania. He has membership in numerous professional organizations, including the American Anthropological Association, the African Studies Association, the International African Institute, the Society for Ethnomusicology, and the African Music Society.

Dr. Welmers is married to the former Beatrice Fairbanks '39. They reside in Los Angeles.

Mrs. French is a homemaker and the mother of three children. Her youngest son, Jim, is a freshman at Hope. Her husband, John French '49, is employed by the Burrough's Corporation. They reside in Birmingham, Mich.

Mrs. French is an active member of the First Presbyterian Church of Birmingham. She is currently serving as a vice president on the Board of Directors of the Women's Association for the Detroit Symphony Orchestra. She holds membership in the P.E.O. Sisterhood, a service organization which supports Cotley College in Nevada, Mo. She was an elementary school teacher for three years following her graduation from Hope.

HONORED FOR SERVICE

Herman Laug '29 was awarded the Distinguished Service Award at a special luncheon for Trustees, Alumni Board members, and Alumni Fund class representatives held on Oct. 24. The Board of Trustees last year established the Distinguished Service and Achievements Awards, as means to give formal recognition to individuals for their personal accomplishments or contributions to the College. Mr. Laug is the first recipient of this award.

Mr. Laug was given the award in recognition of his loyalty, generosity, and faithful service to the College, according to Hugh De Pree, chairman of the Board of Trustees.

Mr. Laug was cited for his interest in and support of the College's athletic programs, theatre productions and cultural activities. He has been an effective spokesman for the College to prospective students, parents, churches, and alumni. He has also introduced many potential friends and benefactors to the College.

Mr. Laug responds after receiving Distinguished Service Award.

As a member of the Board of Trustees from 1965-1971, Mr. Laug participated in many of the strategic decisions which have influenced the course of the College, thereby contributing much to the present strength and vitality of Hope. As a charter member of the Second Century Club, he has played a vital part in developing the role of this group.

Mr. Laug has also given tangible evidence of his loyalty and support of Hope. His generous gifts to the College through the deferred giving program have made a significant contribution to the long-term strength of Hope.
A GREAT FALL IN SPORTS!

Hope enjoyed one of its most successful fall sports seasons winning three championships!

The football team recorded its first undefeated season ever with an 8-0-1 record while winning its second MIAA crown in three years.

The cross country squad won its third straight league championship, extending its unbeaten dual meet record to 18 in-a-row.

And the women’s field hockey team was undefeated in WMIAA competition and ended 9-2-1 overall. Nine team members were selected to compete in a Great Lakes states tournament.

The golf team finished third in the MIAA standings posting a 4-2 record while the soccer squad ended fourth with a 3-8-2 mark.

A complete summary of the fall sports season will appear in the next issue of News from Hope College.

EVEY BIT HELPS

The fund drive to raise $3.2 million for construction of a new physical education center is taking all forms. Heather Bultman, 5, (left) and Gretel Van Wieren, 4, sold refreshments at Hope home soccer games. Their daddies are members of the Hope faculty. Heather is the daughter of Jim '63 and Marty '63 Bultman and Gretel the daughter of Glenn '64 and Jacquelyn '67 Van Wieren. Pledges and gifts totaling $1.3 million have been made to the Physical Education Center drive. The College is currently interviewing architects in hopes construction can begin during 1976.

ALUMNI FUND

National Alumni Fund Chairman Jack Hascup '53 proudly dons orange and blue tie after opening two day on-campus conference of alumni who will represent their classes during the 1975-76 Alumni Annual Fund campaign.

Forty-four Class Representatives attended conference on homecoming weekend to be brought up-to-date on College affairs.

Goal this year of the Alumni Annual Fund is $170,000. Last year alumni contributed $143,104 to the annual fund and another $529,998 to designate programs and projects.

Rev. Hascup, who is also President of the Hope College Alumni Association, asked alumni to "reflect seriously about your Hope College experience and what this has meant in your life. And, then, based on that reflection, I challenge you to give as generously as you are able, in order that the experience you and I have had will continue to be available for the young people who are students today and for those who will be students in the years ahead."

POET RETURNED

A bulb—before it becomes a blooming plant—lies secret and silent in the earth. It finds in this condition its only opportunity of existence. Antagonistic forces pass it by as it lies hid in its work of self-development. So must your reason develop—hid in yourself.

—Cornelius Agrippa

Delwyn Sneller, a Holland native, graduated from Hope in 1967. In 1969 he received his MA, and in 1972 his Ph.D. in English from Michigan State University. For the next two years he taught English at Brescia College in Kentucky. He resigned in the spring of 1974 and returned to Holland, where he lives with his wife, Jereen, and their three daughters. For the past year he has been working as a carpet cutter in a local factory.

Although he has been writing for as long as he can remember (and writing well, as his former instructors remember), only recently has Sneller's poetry begun to find a large audience. Since he left teaching he has had 14 publications, an extraordinary indication of acceptance by poetry editors. He carries a notebook with him, constantly jotting phrases and images. He writes almost daily, produces perhaps a poem each week, edits and deletes his work mercilessly. He keeps a large notebook in which there is a page for every poem; on this page is recorded the name of the poem, dates submitted, names of magazines, acceptance or rejection, and any comments received from editors. It is a careful record, yet Sneller is surprisingly modest about his recent success. It becomes evident that what is important to him is the making of poems, that he would be writing whether anyone published his work or not.

Nor is he eager to discuss poetry in the abstract. Theories bore him:

"But why should I explain the imagery I compulsively form?"

he asks in "Catocala." When asked why he writes he said, before answering the question, "Never make this elephant walk that glass beam again." His reply:

"Kierkegaard, catalpas, Eric Clapton, Spoon River Anthology, Monet, tactful Jim Prins, Elmer's glue, Pascal, pipe tabacco, October, Stafford, Home-made wine, Herbert, Donne, old wood, agates, the Trappist Monastery in Bardstown, Peter S. Beagle, storms, Vivaldi, ghost stories, Lake Superior, Milton, catocala moths, Job, H. B. Snow, spaghetti, Ecclesiastes, spiders, Whitman, UFOs, Whittier, Bach, Van Gogh, cigars in zero weather, the creative process. I enjoy writing. This enjoyment is linked to ambition, the same type that causes others to desire wealth or profession or piety or the largest coho. And I enjoy the discipline. When I was a boy, I could tell which swallowtails had torn wings by watching how they flew. Now I do this with words. Leave it at enjoyment. And beyond that—"

"Sunflowers break the direction clouds go. This is all I know of what I undertake."

It doesn't take long to discover that Sneller is an energetic man. In his basement, which he paneled with old wood, the visitor finds evidence of a dozen interests—mounted butterflies and moths, spiders, rocks, pipes, books, plants, treatises on the occult, carpentry, home-made wine, records, photographs, a typewriter.

It doesn't take long, either, to discover that this restless, comfortable, happy man is possessed of unusually keen senses. A portrait artist would concentrate, surely on the eyes, quick and penetrating behind wire-rimmed glasses. He has the singleminded curiosity of a naturalist, the perceptive wisdom of a seer, and a rare talent for making images. Witness (this from "Old Walter"):

From his attic window
He measures brittle shadows
Between hemlocks,
Remembering seasons with her.
Lost eleven Julys ago.

At twilight
And during thunderstorms
He waits in the kitchen
With his glasses on.

Or this, called "Frisbee":

Like a silver spoon
In the hands of a curious child,
Lake Michigan hollowed under Sand dune plateaus.
Jon placed a red round flight
Level on the air between us.
Snakegrass leaned beneath
The revolving shadow Lifted by wind a while
Against the afternoon sun.

From 'Srei Ap Amen' there emerges a sensitivity to violence as though the poet had shed a layer of skin and left the nerves exposed. Following the contrast of a brutal murder in Viet Nam with a Washington peace march, the poem concludes

Under sudden scarlet thunder
My absurd nights
Sweat turning emotions.

Tomorrow I'll pull my shades
Against an all-day wind
And listen to my fingers
Pick the plaster wall.

How does such a writer feel about factory work, compared with teaching? "I can pretend that teaching is a battle field and factory work is a paradise. Or vice-versa, depending on my mood. Who is in a position to say whether my move from Director of Creative Writing to Carpet Cutter is a rise or fall? My Ph.D. is still a symbol of accomplishment, and the learning that went into achieving it is still valuable to me."

"Time and my persistence at writing will have to justify (if justification is needed) my working in a factory. Because of my new vocation, I finally have time to write poetry. The old excuses that kept me from maturing as a writer—student essays to grade, research to do, conferences to attend—are no longer part of my life. These days I am through with work at 3:30."

Jereen, who worked to help him through graduate school, speaks to the subject also. "Del doesn't have exactly the same feelings I do about his career and his Ph.D. This must be because he gained from all those hard years, while I feel as though I've been left holding an empty dream. He has his gift of writing and all the knowledge that goes with getting a Ph.D. All I have is memories of hard times—emotionally and financially."

"Living in Spartan Village, MSU married housing, was no treat, and even though we had our first two daughters while there, the poverty we experienced marred the joy they gave. We never had enough money, even while on food stamps, but during those five years there was always this drive we shared to get through it all so we could become part of the elite. We were told we would look back and laugh at the hard times."

At Brescia, Jereen became an active faculty wife. "I even threw the first faculty Christmas party. I seemed to be born to live this sort of life." But their younger daughter became allergic to the climate and Del became allergic to the college. He was overqualified and underpaid. And so they moved back to Lake Michigan.

"Now," Jereen continues, "after giving up financial security and a career I had just started and enjoyed as a librarian, I find myself with a talented though poor husband who cuts carpet eight hours a day. In the eyes of my relatives I have gotten no further than my mother who was married to a man who sanded boats for a living."

"These past seven years I've seen corruption in academia I never knew could exist. This has left a scar on both of us. The talent a person works to perfect has nothing to do with how secure his future will be in academia. Maybe I have learned more than I hoped."

In a poem to Jereen, Sneller wrote

Why should I trust myths.
When your face is beautiful in sunlight?
Love should be the slow, complete praise of shapes.
For flesh, like earth, must turn each longing to its own.
The potter's hands fill with clay
While his thoughts round and rise to art.

Delwyn Sneller quit teaching because his daughter became ill in the Kentucky climate, and because he was dissatisfied. In verse he put it this way:

Across the horse-head bridge
I found myself a faculty Not lost enough to wonder where
The nuns pinned silver owls Night eyed with amethyst to habits practical as parking lots.
Two years I outlined Crane's escape
To sharks and balanced Whitman overthrow.
A cardboard box near full of rain.
And then I left. It was the sky

Upon the place, too heavy to go up
And storms that caught my mind outdoors.

And the storms brought him back to Holland, to a job in a factory, to writing poems. He is a skilled and sensitive poet, a journeyman in one of the most difficult arts; he's never made a nickel at it and it has never occurred to him to resent the fact that poets are the poorest of artists. He makes poems because he likes making poems. His life seems to fit together despite seeming contradictions. He likes working in the factory, likes the men he works with, likes teaching a class on John Calvin at a local church. These things satisfy him. He lives on Vans Boulevard (gravel) and writes "Compensation":

September seven o'clock morning.
Harold touches a praying mantis
Warmed by the light
Above the factory door.

He knocks
Summertime from his pipe.
The time clock
Fastens red numbers to his card.
The snot bed saw Screams twenty blades above sawdust.
Wood stacked from its lips
Trembles.

Static electricity bites
From the two inch steel of planers
Boring machines kneel Drills through birch beams.

Above the squall at eight o'clock
A small router screeches
"Gotcha!
Harold.

And a fool to say lucky.

Sneller makes wine and peers beneath the bark of dead trees, and those who read West Coast Poetry Review, Seams, Hard Cider, Stone Country and the like have access to the eau de vin, the distilled products of his ferment. He probes beneath the bark to discover those things that lie "secret and silent in the earth."

Would he rather be teaching? "That's an impossible question to answer. " If he had to do over again, what would he change? "I would laugh more."
CULTURE SHOCK

New Peace Corps volunteers are warned to expect "culture shock" when they go overseas and are told they must adjust to an occasionally harsh, usually unfamiliar way of life in a foreign country. However, for Kathleen Buurma '66 who recently completed a two year Peace Corp service term on the island of Mindanao in the Philippines, culture shock hit only when she returned to the United States and began looking for a teaching job in a saturated market. Matters were complicated when she discovered that her low income as a volunteer prohibits her from qualifying for unemployment compensation. Faced with the harshness of current economic conditions, Kathy looks back on her two years in the Philippines as "blissful living."

Kathy was involved in many facets of the reading program in the Surigao City schools. She tutored remedial students and solicited book donations for use by students. With three years experience as a fourth grade teacher in Traverse City, Mich., Kathy was on familiar ground.

"A reading people is a thinking people," she says. "Every community and nation wants that. I saw this as my people-to-people mission in the Philippines."

With a population of approximately 40,000, Surigao City offered many of the comforts of home, Kathy reports. The two-story cement home she shared with a Filipino family was located in the center of town. "However, the noise of the city traffic didn't drown out that of roosters and pigs and occasional carabaos which joined the continuous parade of tricycles.

"It's a small place," she continues. "Twenty minutes of walking brought you from one end to another, from the coconut-lined seashore to the top of the rolling hills overlooking the city. Most of the people in between seemed to know me better than I know myself. That's the beauty of a small town."

Mindanao, which is about the size of Indiana, is the second largest island in the Philippine archipelago. The Philippines were a Spanish colony for 400 years before being ceded to the U.S. after the Spanish-American War. In 1946 the nation was granted independence. It is now a republic of 40 million people, growing at the rate of 10 per cent a year and taxing its agricultural and industrial resources in the process, says Kathy.

The Filipino people, with their various Chinese, Malaysian, Spanish, American and Japanese ancestries, are "like a mosaic," according to Kathy. "The hospitable nature of the people, combined with a trace of colonial feeling, resulted in my immediate acceptance."

"Sometimes people forget that there was only one of me, that my limits were human. Never mind if you have just finished eating a heavy supper, have another one and eat it with just as much gusto as the first. Never mind if you don't know how to sing, you will gain one Filipino-American friendship if you do. It was quite a change in roles—and a pleasant one!"

Filipinos speak an estimated 87 regional dialects and languages and, according to Kathy, Surigao City boasts its share. In homes and market places a local dialect is used. At church and formal gatherings, Cebuano is most common. In schools, English is taught along with Tagalog, the national language.

The multilingual school system creates special problems for the slow learner, Kathy found. She worked to diagnose reading problems and develop a pair of reading kits—one dealing with comprehension and the other with reading enrichment.

"Where did I fit in this babel of languages? I could use English 99 percent of the time and be understood, but the motivation existed to learn the dialect and be able to join in the Filipinos' lively conversations," she says.

Kathy had her share of mishaps in learning the new language. Because of the similarity of the Cebuano words for "getting married" and "going fishing," she says, "When I said I wanted to spend a relaxing day fishing at the pier, my friends were already putting a wedding cake in the oven!"

Kathy eventually took the hint, it appears. During her term of service, she became engaged to a co-worker in the school. She hopes her Filipino friends will have the wedding cake in a very slow oven, however: the date of the wedding is entirely dependent upon when her fiancé can get through the red tape of obtaining a visa to join her in America. "About all I can say about my wedding is that it's in the future," she concludes. "Meanwhile, whereas before I was looking for a teaching job, I'm now looking for a non-teaching job!"

WE GET LETTERS

Editor's note: This letter refers to the photo essay, "Behind every Successful Puller... There's a Morale Girl," printed in the Sept./Oct. issue of News from Hope College.

In this day of women's struggles for respect and dignity, I found this article and the captions under the photos to be offensive and degrading to women. You have perpetuated, even if unintentional, the belief that women are second-class citizens, by your insensitiveness to them in your article. To call men of 18 years or older MEN, yet refer to women of 18 years or older GIRLS is just one example of your lack of sensitivity. Your description of what a "morale girl" does only shows a women in a supportive and maternal role. Surely women are persons and the women who participated in the pull did more than just wipe off brows and cheer on the men. They were and are their own persons.

I would appreciate it if in the future you write and think of women as women, not as appendages to men.

Tena Willemsma '68

Editor's note: The following letter was addressed to Dr. Paul Fried and discusses this past summer's German American Experience Program, which involved 59 German high school students. Writer Phil Ceeley was involved in an internship program with a German bank last summer.

Last night I was sitting in our library in Scheid where I live, watching television. The program was called "New York, New York," and there was a report about the Alaskan pipeline. After this report, in absolute amazement, I watched a group of students coming through the arch at Hope College. This was, of course, a film report over your program. It showed the students in downtown Holland, an interview with Rolf Italiandaar, "German Night" in the Holland High School, the visit to Ebony magazine, and the German students talking to the blacks, and finally an interview with some of the students. The last scene showed the group leaving Hope in a nice charter bus followed by our famous Flying Dutchman bus. The report lasted for almost an hour. I could hardly believe it. If I was in Hamburg I could understand it, but here in Saarland! The report must have been broadcast to the entire country. This is probably better treatment than you received in Michigan. I must congratulate you on what must have been a fantastic program.

This is my last week at the Landeszentralbank, on Saturday, the 30th, I fly back to Detroit. On September 2nd I start work on my M.B.A. degree at the College of William and Mary in Williamsburg, Va. The program will take two years. I have also had a very good experience here in Saarland and my German is a lot better. This is just a note: I had to write you and tell you about last night.

FIRST-TIME AUTHOR

"I have taught this system to many players. Those who have been playing for some time tell of a queasy feeling in their stomach the first few times they get up courage to use this system. To a disciplined book player the mind begins to experience horrible apprehensions. But, relax, it works for me and many others who are brave and daring at the table," writes the first-time author.

Grunden is an ordained Methodist clergyman. After 20 years of service in the ministry, he is now a conservationist for the Massachusetts Department of Natural Resources.

He's a lifelong bridge player. "I play for fun, I play to win, I enjoy the atmosphere of the competition, and in so doing meet some of the best people on earth," he says.

MEMORIES

Joining the ranks of Michiganders who knew Gerald R. Ford "way back when" is Robert A. DeYoung '50. He remembers the President as a very special client at the Holland Country Club in the early 1940s.

Whenever Jerry broke a golf club in Holland, it brightened the day of his caddie, young Bob DeYoung, who became the recipient of the cast-off clubs.

"Those were the first clubs I ever had. I had them welded so I could use them. Some of the sticks are still in my possession," says DeYoung, who is now assistant superintendent charged with employer relations in the Kalamazoo, Mich. school system. He adds that the duties of his current position don't leave much time for golf.

His wife, the former Irene Boer '47 also has memories of encountering some big name personalities. In 1950 she was the U.S. woman's water-ski champion and was deemed talented enough to ski at Cypress Gardens as part of the Hollywood film, "Easy to Love," starring Esther Williams and Van Johnson.

The DeYounsg now watch the news and the late movies on TV from their home in Kalamazoo. Their daughter, Diane, is a freshman at Hope.
