Papers, 1907-2005. 6.50 linear ft.

Abstract

Anne Ruth De Young graduated from Hope College in 1942. She served as a Reformed Church of America missionary in Amoy, China, and Oman as a nurse. This collection consists of correspondence from De Young and her brother Ed, newspaper clippings, books, pamphlets, photographs, and information on the mission fields served by the Reformed Church of America (RCA).

The photographs in the collection feature not only De Young, but other RCA missionaries including Jeanette Boersma, Jeanette Veldman, Gladys Kooy, Wells and Beth Thoms, Marge Doorenbos, Paul Harrison, Mary Allison, Elaine Bosch, Harold Storm, Marilyn Tanis, Maurice Heusinkveld, Signe Jung, and the Nykerk family. Additional media includes a movie titled Wells Thoms: Missionary (ca. 1970), The Arabic Mission, 1889-1989 (1989), and digital images of the Bahrain church (2006).

Biography

From childhood, Anne R. De Young was interested in missions. One of seven children, she was born into a family involved in Christian service. Her father was a Reformed Church minister, and an aunt served as a nurse at Annville Institute.

A native of Clymer, New York, De Young received her nursing certificate from Berea (Kentucky) College School of Nursing in 1938. Four years later, she graduated from Hope College. In preparation for her medical missionary work, she studied Chinese in Berkeley, California, and later attended the Kennedy School of Mission in Hartford, Connecticut, and the School of Midwifery in New York City. After one year at Scudder Memorial Hospital in India, De Young went on to serve with the Amoy Mission in China from 1946 to 1951. She was reassigned to the Arabian Mission in 1952.

De Young's "first love" was teaching. In addition to the many administrative tasks required of mission nurses, she managed to give simple nurses' training to a number of the local Arab employees.

In 1959, De Young became superintendent of nurses at Mutrah General Hospital in Muscat, Oman. Here she had numerous opportunities to share the Christian faith while teaching and supervising nurses and their helpers. When the Oman Ministry of Health was formed in 1970, the mission medical work was gradually integrated with the government services, and De Young continued to work for them, using her knowledge of Arabic to teach and train medical orderlies.

In 1978, she was asked to become the Nursing Superintendent of the District Hospital in Tanam, a village far in the interior of Oman. For De Young, nursing provided many challenges and exciting opportunities to share the Christian faith and demonstrate Christ's healing ministry. With enthusiasm and life-long commitment, she was constantly finding new ways to make the Christian life real for those Christ had called her to serve.

De Young retired from the mission field in 1982 and spent her retirement years by remaining active in church and community affairs. She served as an elder at Trinity Reformed Church in Rochester, New York, sang in the choir, served as church librarian and as chairmen of the Friendship Visitation Committee. She also served the community as a Literacy Volunteer Tutor. Anne R. De Young passed away on February 20, 2007.

Scope and Content

This collection consists of correspondence from De Young and her brother Ed, newspaper clippings, books, pamphlets, photographs, and information on the mission fields served by the Reformed Church of America (RCA). The photographs in the collection feature not only Anne De Young, but other RCA missionaries including Jeanette Boersma, Jeanette Veldman, Gladys Kooy, Wells and Beth Thoms, Marge Doorenbos, Paul Harrison, Mary Allison, Elaine Bosch, Harold Storm, Marilyn Tanis, Maurice Heusinkveld, Signe Jung, and the Nykerk family. Additional media includes a movie titled Wells Thoms: Missionary (ca. 1970), The Arabic Mission, 1889-1989 (1989), and digital images of the Bahrain church (2006). The collection is arranged alphabetically by subject, then chronologically.
